

A hungry jaguar hunts for prey in the shadows. Its yellow eyes glare and stare. Suddenly, it sees something move on a low branch.

Will the little tree frog be its dinner?

Night sight

Many jaguars hunt at night. Like other cats, they can see well in dim light. At night, their pupils are big. They let in more light. During the day, their pupils are smaller. They let in less light.

